

Andrew Lowenthal

Senior Vice President, Business Development and Global Expansion

Andrew B. Lowenthal is Senior Vice President, Business Development and Global Expansion for Cboe Global Markets, Inc. (Cboe). Based in Chicago, Lowenthal leads Cboe in identifying domestic and international business and expansion opportunities. Lowenthal spearheads the company's initiative to establish a global expansion roadmap, while strategically leveraging Cboe's existing partnerships to define markets worldwide.

Previously, Lowenthal co-led the sales, product development and competitive strategy for the company's U.S. equities, futures, options and global foreign exchange businesses, its suite of market data and access services products, as well as the firm's growing ETP listings business.

Prior to this role, Lowenthal led Cboe's Global Derivatives group, which included the exchange operator's four options exchanges, Cboe Futures Exchange (CFE), and products related to the Cboe Volatility Index (VIX). He led the Global Client Services group, which focused on business development and account management across all channels and in all geographies and directed Cboe's Business Analysis and Institutional and International Business Development groups.

He began his career with Cboe in 1983, serving in Trading Operation, Regulatory Services, Strategic Planning and Business Development division roles.

Lowenthal attended the University of Michigan and holds a Bachelor of Science in business and an MBA in Operations Planning from the DePaul University School of Business. He also attended the Securities Industry Institute at The Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania. He is actively involved with the United Holocaust Memorial Museum and the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center and serves on the Board of Renaissance Social Services in Chicago.